You've all got tiny cocks

Judging by the overt misogyny that appears in your boysie comic, I can only assume that you all have hang-ups about the size of your cocks and probably feel threatened by females of all ages. Your evident hatred of women makes your comic as low grade as The Sun, The Sport and other papers you pretend to ridicule.

**We're sorry you feel that way Jenny. But cheer up. Your prize letter has won you a free copy of our Fat Slags video - out in November.*

Regarding Braintree in Essex (Letterbox, issue 54). I also live in Braintree, Essex. And here's a photograph to prove it. So put that in your pipe and smoke it!

C. Palmer

Sir Andrew-Lloyd Weber has just bought a Canaletto from Sotherbys for ten million quid. Well I've just bought a can of lager from Tesco's for 39p. Who's the cunt?

E. O'Dross

Police often warn old folk to be on their guard against bogus officials who call at their door. Well my mother is 93, but she won't be caught out by the con men. She keeps a pan of chip fat constantly on the boil, and pours it over the head of any caller who cannot prove their identity.

P. Fletcher
Mildenhall

On the issue of passive smoking, I think it's outrageous that I have to spend over two quid on a packet of tabs when it has been scientifically proved that I am sharing them with some tight fisted gits who've never even bought a box of matches. Isn't it about time these so-called "non-smokers" were made to compensate us honest smokers for passively enjoying our fags.

Big feet warning

Any young girls thinking of getting married, take a word of advice. Don't marry anyone with big feet. If you do your children will have big feet too.

A. Everett
Brighton

I think the police get a raw deal at the hands of the British media. On the one hand society asks them to put themselves at risk in order to protect us from crime. And then we complain the minute they start beating people up, or jailing a few innocent paddies. You can't make an omelette without breaking eggs. Ask any chef. So come on, give Britain's bobbies our backing. They deserve it.

Det. Con. D. Witherspoon

They say that if you shop around you will always find a bargain. Well I visited a dozen estate agents before buying my house for £275,000. And now it's worth £190,000. So fuck that little theory.

J. Brown

The other day I sat down with a cup of tea and tried to decide who I'd rather go to bed with: Michelle Pfeiffer or Melanie Griffiths. I weighed up the pros and cons of each, taking into account Michelle's curvaceous cat-like figure, Melanie's girlish features and both girls' impressive busts. However, after a couple of hours - and several more cups of tea - I still could not decide between the two. Could any of your readers help me to decide which of these two Hollywood beauties I would rather go to bed with?

Harold Garratt

History repeats itself

It's all very good making jokes about the Germans stealing the deck chairs in holiday resorts, but that is where the rot sets in. Next thing you know they'll be annexing the swimming pool and the whole shennanigans will start all over again.

M. Newell

Correct me if I'm wrong, but it seems to me that lorry drivers are responsible for a disproportionately high amount of murders in Britain. It's certainly something worth bearing in mind the next time you see them flashing their lights at each other on motorways.

Hat off to T.V. chefs

Is it any wonder that the staff in food shops, cafes and restaurants don't wear hats anymore when TV chefs such as Keith Floyd and Lloyd Grossman don't wear hats. I think it's high time people in the catering industry wore hats again.

Mrs A. Burgess
Burlford

Why all the concern about falling standards in our schools? I'm pretty thick myself, and I certainly don't want some smart arse fucking student coming along and taking my job in a few years time just cos he's got loads of qualifications. 'Keep 'em thick', that's what I say.

ENSURE circular objects such as vases stand centrally on your mantle piece by subtracting the diameter of the object from the length of the mantle piece and dividing by two. Then simply cut a piece of string or nylon fishing cord to that length. Place the cut edge of the string flush to one edge of the mantle piece and then slide the vase or object along it's length until the vase or object abuts the other edge of the string. The string can then be popped into the vase and re-used later should it be moved for any reason.

YOU ASK WE ANSWER

How come a three legged stool stands up, whilst when I saw a leg off a chair it falls over?

A Tetbury
Flamborough

This one isn't as simple as it first looks. Your poser is all to do with gravity, the 'glue' which sticks apples - and chairs - to the floor.

Astronauts unstuck this glue by going into space, where they weigh less than a feather, and consequently do not need chairs.

So whilst a stool is merely a tall, thin chair with no back, a three legged chair will always wobble due to the fact that one of its legs is missing.

LET'S NAIL SHED CRIME

Real life Tynesdie crime fighters have come to the rescue of TV Geordie cop come pop singer Jimmy Nail.

Chart topper Nail normally dishes out justice in his role as TV's 'Spender'. But this time Geordie Jim was on the receiving end - of some useful advice from real life Northumbria Police officers.

'SPENDER' MINUTE STUDYING THESE 10 SHED SECURITY TIPS

Police warned tough guy actor Jimmy that his garden shed may be at risk from burglars. "During 1991 there were 9,153 burglaries from garden sheds in the Northumbria police region", a police spokesman told Jimmy. "And my message to shed owners is 'Start thinking now about improving the physical security of garden sheds and other outbuildings'."

Real life ex-boozer and former jail bird Jim, now on the right side of the law and happily married with two kids, was happy to take the advice on offer. And with crime on the increase, he recommends that Viz readers do the same. So here's Spender's Top Ten Tips to protect your garden shed from unwanted visitors this summer.

1. Fit a hasp with concealed screws and a strong padlock.
2. Fit window locks too.
3. Consider using reinforced glass in shed windows.
4. Don't leave tools in the shed which might be used to burgle your house.
5. Fit extra locks to your shed then use them, even if you're only nipping out of your shed for a few moments.
6. If you go away, ask a neighbour to keep an eye on your shed.

7. If you leave valuables in your shed, like a mountain bike, mark it with your postcode so it can be identified.
8. Install security lights and movement detectors around your shed.
9. Surround your shed with a fence, AND a thorny hedge for extra protection.
10. Don't allow shrubs and bushes around your shed to overgrow, as this provides cover for a shed thief to work behind.

20 THINGS YOU NEVER KNEW ABOUT FRANCE

With the opening of the Channel Tunnel, due for completion in 1992, we'll soon be seeing a lot more of the French.

Dislike them or hate them, there'll be no avoiding them. So how much do we really know about our excitable next door neighbours? Here's 20 garlic stinking facts you probably never knew about the frogs.

1 For many years Britain and France were at war. It was them who started it, in 1066. But we won when Nelson defeated the French navy at the Battle of Trafalgar Square.

2 Like the English, the French have a proud naval history. Their greatest victory came in 1985 when they sank the unarmed protest ship 'Greenpeace Warrior', which was docked at the time, in Auckland, New Zealand.

3 The world famous French Foreign Legion is a crack military regiment which, coincidentally, has very few French soldiers in it.

4 Unlike the British Legion which is a string of social clubs where overweight men play darts, bingo and drink beer.

5 In France 8 out of every 10 schoolchildren can speak reasonable English by the age of 16, whilst in Britain only 1 in every hundred school leavers can speak any French at all. That's because French is a stupid language, with three different words for 'the', depending whether you're a man or a woman, or how many of you there are, or something.

6 The French are renowned for being the world's greatest lovers. Yet their sexiest man is Charles Aznavour, a 92 year-old, balding, midget cabaret singer.

Aznavour - 2 foot tall and bald.

7 If your postman sticks a 'French letter' through your letterbox, don't rip it open to see what's inside. Because a French letter is another word for a contraceptive sheath.

8 French films on Channel 4, with subtitles, are usually a good bet if you want to see a few birds getting their kits off on the telly.

9 France is famous for its thousands of vineyards where the world's finest wines are produced.

10 And it's thousands of pavement cafes and bistros where most of it gets pissed up the wall by the locals, who drink like fish.

11 France's greatest tourist attraction is the Eiffel Tower, a giant electricity pylon with a gift shop at the top.

12 The Statue of Liberty was a gift from the people of France to the United States of America to celebrate 100 years of French independence. And what did they get in return? Euro-Disney.

13 The famous French dairy farmer Louis Pasteur made one of the most significant scientific advances of the 20th century when he invented Pasteurised milk, in small plastic catering size cartons.

14 France is famous for its many great painters, among them Toulouse Lautrec, a three foot tall sex pervert who hung around the Moulin Rouge, a high class strip joint in Paris, painting birds with long legs.

15 The most famous of the French Impressionists is Marcel Marceaux, who doesn't do people, he does the wind, and glass boxes, and Kodak adverts.

A farmhouse yesterday

16 Farmhouse holidays in the South of France are currently very popular with the British middle classes. But instead of paying for bed and breakfast accommodation, they just buy the fucking farmhouse instead.

17 If it's that bloody nice in France why don't you stay there, and don't come back. You smarmy bastards.

18 If you ask a Parisian for directions to the 'Underground', you'll probably be shown into a small street cafe, shoved in a barrel and smuggled to Switzerland. That's because in France the 'underground' is a secret organisation for putting people in barrels and smuggling them to Switzerland.

19 The French were founder members of EEC, and, in accordance with EEC agricultural policy, Britain buys boat loads of their rotten onions, while French lorry drivers set fire to lorry loads of British sheep.

20 Finally, never share a shower with a Frenchman. For among their more peculiar toilet habits, the French occasionally squat and spend tuppence in the cubicle, and then poke it down the plug-hole ... with their toes.

21 And there's another thing. France have never won the World Cup, which we did, in 1966.

YOU'RE all going on a Summer Holiday!

Well, ten of you anyway

Needless to say we've shoved our very own FAT SLAGS single 'Summer Holiday' in at No.1 in this week's chart. And to help send our saucy Slags soaring straight to the top of Britain's other pop charts, we want you to buy it. And in return we're offering you a super Top Ten chance to win ten terrific summer holidays for two!

We're giving away holidays in Whitley Bay to ten lucky winners who correctly answer our Top Ten Pop Holiday Quiz. And we asked the artists in our Top Ten chart to set the questions.

THE STYLOPHONE COUNCIL were runners up to the Slags and they have a tape available for £2.75 from The Leazes, Leazes Avenue, Chaldon, Colchester, CR3 5AG. Their holiday pop teaser is this: 1. Name the silly Dutch buggers who sang the Holiday Rap.

Third place in the chart goes to a board game for adults, RAVE was available in the shops until the News Of The World found out about it. Now it can only be bought by post, price £20, from RAVCO, P.O.Box 1796, London W9 3XA. Rave's creator, a Mr Wow, set the following poser: 2. Who sang about a holiday in Cambodia?

Viz chart regular ANDREW TAIT would normally be disappointed with fourth place, but this week Andrew doesn't give a toss. That's because 'Taity' is to be married, to Maggie Peacock, and he tells us that Viz readers are welcome to attend. Kick off is at 11am on August 8th, at St Anthony's church, Bedford. Andrew thought a honeymoon holiday question would be appropriate, and asked: 4. Who had a hit in 1959 with the theme from Honeymoon?

TOP VIZ TEN

Hertfordshire based techno outfit DEF REBEL ED make their Viz chart debut at 5. It's the usual story. No record, just a crappy tape which they'll send you if you post £5.00 to them at 67 Lancaster Avenue, Hitchin, Herts, SG5 1PA. They came up with an easy question: 5. Which group released Holiday In The Sun?

One time Viz contributor and Independent pop poet MARTIN NEWELL makes a welcome return at No.6 with his highly amusing book of pop and other poetry. It's available in exchange for an A5 envelope and £4.00 made payable to Essex Festival. The address is The Literary Dept, University of Essex, Colchester, Essex CO4 3SQ. Martin asked: 6. Apart from Summer Holiday which other hit single did Cliff Richard take from the soundtrack of the film?

PETER BUCKLEY - HILL was mistakenly called Buckley - Smith in our Christmas issue. But he is in fact called Buckley - Hill. He has a new album out featuring songs about sausages, birds and other things. It costs £5.50 (inc. P+P) from Peter at 31 Fortress Road, London NW5 1AD. Peter posed the following question: 7. Fiddler's Dram had a lovely time on holiday. But what was their choice of holiday?

BLUE INNOCENCE are a young indie groove band from Salford, Lancashire who describe themselves as 'a bunch of trendy wankers'. Well, we've seen a photo of them, and we agree. They have a tape, priced £4.99, from 24 Richmond Road, West Wimbledon, London SW20 0PQ. 8. When Typically Tropical checked in for their 1975 flight to Barbados, which check-in desk did they head for?

Sharing eighth place with the trendy wankers are the FISH BROTHERS, a Victorian/Music Hall/Punk/Cabaret band who play at the Prince Albert in Brighton. They offer a 13 track cassette for £2.50 from 18 York Road, Hove, East Sussex, BN1 3DL. They have a tricky one: 9. What was missing when Wham! holidayed at the Club Tropicana?

Only 18 year olds and over may enter. Prizes will be awarded to the first ten correct entries drawn from a hat, and will consist of hotel accommodation plus breakfast and evening meals for two people, plus train tickets from anywhere in mainland Britain. Winners will be offered a limited choice of late season dates. (That means you'll get a choice of two weekends, and it will be raining).

Entries for the Viz Top Ten should be sent to the same address, and should be accompanied by some money.

Finally, and only just squeezing in at No.10 after a drop from last week's 6, ADOLF CHIP-PAN returns with his controversial 'Soaraway Sun' single, still available from the address we gave last time. # IT'S LITTLE OLD MAN

After being buried for forty five years...

WE FIND HITLER'S WANK MAGS

A pile of dirty books belonging to Hitler have been discovered buried in a shallow grave in former Russian occupied Berlin.

The porno mags, which were in a plastic bag, were previously believed to have been destroyed by Hitler's faithful SS guard shortly after the Fuhrer's death.

KREMLIN

But Russian military records, only just made public by the Kremlin, revealed that the male interest mags, which Hitler carried with him throughout the war, were secretly buried on Stalin's orders after the Russian leader had looked at them for a bit.

PENTAGON

If scientific tests on the pages of the magazines - some of which were stuck together - confirm that they were Hitler's, it will reinforce the popular theory that towards the end of the war the Fuhrer had become obsessed with pornographic material.

Experts believe that Hitler intended to harness pornography for use as a weapon against the allies, and that in 1945 Nazi scientists were on the verge of inventing the dirty video - a breakthrough that could have changed the outcome of the war. For Hitler had planned to bombard Britain with copies of his new secret weapon, hoping that triple X hardcore porn videos, featuring red hot explicit sex action, would distract the British population sufficiently to tilt the balance of power in Germany's favour.

We offered Hitler's dirty magazines to The Sunday Times, cos that's that sort of shit they buy, but they haven't rang us back yet.

THE MYSTERY OF SHINGLE COVE

For years mystery and rumour have surrounded the sudden evacuation of the village of Shingle Cove on the Suffolk coast in November, 1944.

And despite official denials, to this day locals still believe that their village was the target of Hitler's first experimental 'porn warfare' attack.

TRAPEZIUM

The story goes that on that cold winters night German planes flew overhead and dropped thousands of propaganda leaflets on the small fishing community. But they were no ordinary propaganda leaflets that rained down onto the beach, like giant snowflakes in a swirling blizzard. As one local who claims to have witnessed the attack recalls,

CLOWNS

"They were pictures of the Queen Mother, with no clothes on", Fred Gutteridge, now 78, told us.

Despite his advancing years, and the onset of incontinence, Fred still vividly recalls the dirty pamphlets that fell from the sky. "They were disgusting. She was completely naked, in all sorts of positions. Flap shots, the lot".

BEARDED LADY

On another page a fictitious newspaper headline told how Princess Di had worked in Amsterdam as a prostitute, and regularly had sex with four men at once on a filthy mattress.

HARDCORE

Military analysts believe that Hitler's propaganda chiefs had used hardcore Swedish models to pose for disgusting and lewd photographs and then superimposed the Queen Mum's head on top.

QUEEN MUM - Filthy pictures

The pamphlet was designed to shock the British public and lower vital wartime morale.

Fred recalls how the army quickly sealed off the village and confiscated all the pamphlets. "They took them all to some woods nearby and burnt them", he told us.

BALLAST

The mystery of Shingle Cove will remain unsolved until the year 2500 when official War Office files on the incident are opened to the public.

GOEBBELS - Nazi number two.

Dr Ludmila Fredrikson of the Swedish Institute of Advanced Sexual Research believes that Hitler's unique medical condition - he is believed to have had only one testicle - could account for his apparent obsession.

DODECOHEDRON

"A one nutted person would indeed have an enormous appetite for filth", she told us.

Gracie and Vera in Nazi porno shocker

Sex mad Hitler had drawn up detailed plans of what he intended to do with Britain if he had won the war. And, according to Kremlin war records released this week, one of the filthy minded Nazi's top priorities was to make disgusting porno videos starring Vera Lynn and Gracie Fields.

SEX BOMB - Hitler's secret weapon - the triple 'X' porno movie

The would-be porn king planned to lure the British songbirds into a career in blue movies, by offering them tons of Nazi gold. And together with his right hand man Goebbels, Hitler had already written several scripts in which Lynn and Fields, the darlings of the British Forces, were expected to perform;

- * TOPLESS
- * GIRL ON GIRL
- * and HAMBURGER SHOTS

However, Hitler's adult video plans, together with his plan for world domination, were scuppered when he lost the war.

T.V. MOTSON'S SUNKEN TREASURE HOPES SINK

Plans for a treasure hunting expedition to the Carribean lead by BBC football commentator John Motson have run aground.

Motson had planned to set sail with a crew of BBC Sport colleagues and go in search of sunken treasure worth millions of pounds. But after months of planning Motson has had to cancel the expedition which has been besieged by problems throughout.

TREASURE

The first blow came when Match Of The Day colleagues accused Motson of forging a treasure map which he claimed showed the whereabouts of buried Spanish gold.

DARLING

"His map, which was supposed to be 300 years old, was drawn in felt pen on the back of BBC notepaper", one colleague told us.

PETAL

A further set back came when Motson was unable to hire a boat for his 6,000 mile round journey, as the 44 year old commentator has no sailing experience whatsoever.

DUCKY

And the final blow came when BBC bosses refused Motson six months off work, due to the forthcoming Olympic Games.

LAMB CHOPS

Motson had already seen three of his intended crew members drop out due to work commitments. Fellow football commentator Barry

DAVID VINE - dropped out

Davies, snooker anchor man David Vine and football analyst Trevor Brooking had been Motson's first choice of shipmates. But despite frantic phone calls to other colleagues, and offers of substantial amounts of gold, he was unable to find replacements.

BASIL BRUSH

However one BBC insider told us that Motson, who inherited the BBC's football

Some sunken treasure yesterday

commentary crown from David Coleman, has not given up entirely, and may launch another expedition early next year, possibly using advanced technology to help in his search for treasure.

Colleagues in the Match of The Day office report that Motson has spent several afternoons working on plans for a 'Special Underwater Mini-Submarine' that will enable him to scour the seabed for sunken treasure.

FIREBALL DI'S HUMAN TORCH TERROR!

By the gardener who saved
her life

A former Buckingham Palace gardener who helped save the Princess of Wales' life during one of her many suicide attempts has come forward to reveal all about the Royal marriage bust up.

And he hopes that by telling his side of the story he may, in some way, earn lots of money.

HORRIFIC

Reg Molesworth personally witnessed one of Diana's most horrific attempts on her life. And if it wasn't for his brave actions the Princess of Wales would not be alive today.

PETROL

"I was working in the garden one afternoon when Diana marched out onto the lawn carrying a can of petrol. Next thing I know she starts pouring it over her head. Then she sits down, gets out a match, and ...whoof! She was away".

SMOKE

Reg fought through clouds of thick black smoke to get to the burning Royal. "The heat was incredible, and I had to keep low to avoid the fumes, but I eventually got close enough to pour water on her with my watering can".

SMOKE AGAIN

After the flames subsided Reg and other gardening staff hosed the Princess down with a sprinkler before Di was whisked away to hospital for emergency treatment. "There was a lot of smoke damage, but otherwise she was okay. Luckily she avoided more serious injury because she had been wearing a flame retardant blouse".

PRINCESS

This was just one of dozens of similar attempts which the Princess made on her life while Reg was working at the Palace. "The chef caught her with her head in the oven so many times he had to switch

Gardener's 999 mercy dash to save burning Princess

to using a microwave. And anything sharp had to be kept under lock and key. Diana's bedroom was like a prison cell, just bare walls, a bunk bed and a bucket in the corner for the call of nature. They even took her shoes off her in case she tried to swallow them".

ALLEGRO

Reg places blame for the Royal marriage rift squarely on Charles' shoulders. "It was obvious to anyone working at the Palace that the poor girl, to put it bluntly, wasn't getting any. He was always away, and when he was around they'd use separate bedrooms. Many's the time she'd be wandering about the garden in a skimpy frock, eyeing up the gardeners. One time I was doing a bit of weeding when I heard her come up behind me. I could feel her eyes staring at my arse. I thought 'Ello what's this?'. But I had to ignore her. It would have been more than my jobs worth to give her one, I can tell you.

MARINA

Mind you, I'm not kidding. If she hadn't been the Princess of Wales I'd have had her in my potting shed any day of the week.

MAESTRO

Reg sees little hope of reconciliation between Di and the House of Windsor. Having fallen out with the Royals himself, he knows from experience how unforgiving the Queen and her family can be.

MONTEGO

"You just can't talk to the Queen. She wants everything her own way. And being the Queen, you can be bloody sure she gets it. If I planted some flowers and they were the wrong colour, quick as a flash she'd be out that door screamin' blue murder. I've done plenty of gardens in my time, but that Queen is a bugger to work for, I can tell you".

BOTANY

According to Reg, he was personally dismissed by Her Majesty after a row over the Royal corgis.

"I was sick of cleaning up their shit off the lawn", he told us. "Every fucking day there'd be another bucket full. So one day I said to her 'How would you like it if my kids came round and shat on your carpet?" That was it. She blew a fuse, and straight away I was out on me arse".

ZOOLOGY

Reg plans to use a detailed diary which he kept during his time at the Palace to write a book revealing the real life Royal dramas that go on behind closed doors. And he's already had one serious enquiry from a leading Sunday newspaper interested in serialising the book.

GENETICS

We would like to point out that Mr Molesworth has received no form of payment whatsoever from this magazine, although we did say we'd send him a cheque next week.

'I CAN SAVE DI'S MARRIAGE'

A Bridlington tradesman yesterday stepped forward and threw a lifeline which could save the Prince and Princess of Wales' marriage from crashing on the rocks.

Joe Kinghorn believes that a caravan holiday could be just the ticket to bring the feuding Royals back together.

TURMOIL

Local trader Joe was genuinely upset when he read reports that the Royal marriage was in turmoil. "I'm a big fan of the Royals, they do a marvellous job, and I have every sympathy for Charles and Di. I realise the pressures they must be under".

CARAVAN

"What they really need is to get away from it all - a complete break. And, what better way to do that than with a caravan", said Joe, Managing Director of Bridlington based Coastal Caravan Sales (UK) Ltd.

"With a caravan in tow Britain becomes your back garden. Every day you can enjoy a different view from your kitchen window. In a word it gives you freedom - freedom to go wherever you please".

LAKES

Joe believes a fortnight or so in the Lakes, or perhaps just the odd weekend away together would give Charles and Di vital breathing space, and a chance to patch up their differences.

RIVERS

"A lot of my customers have similar problems", Joe told us. "I get people in my showroom fighting like cats and dogs. But generally speaking it's the ones who buy the caravans who end up smiling. There's a strange, romantic kind of magic about a caravan, and they're not as expensive as you might think".

Joe Kinghorn displaying one of his many caravans yesterday

STREAMS

Joe has already written to the Palace enclosing a colour brochure and a price list of caravans currently in stock. "I think I've got something for everyone. From the latest, fully equipped luxury models - a real home from home, to the smaller, more compact vehicles. With full credit facilities available - subject to status".

So far Joe has heard nothing from the Prince of Wales, but he is confidently expecting a call. "I quoted him the current list prices, but for a quick sale I would obviously be willing to do a deal on that", said Joe.

COULD YOU SAVE THE ROYAL MARRIAGE?

Have you got a marriage saving idea that could help keep Charles and Diana's marriage afloat?

BUST-UP

Perhaps you have survived a marriage bust-up yourself, or know someone who has. Maybe you have an idea or suggestion that may bring a glimmer of hope to desperate Diana. Or a useful hint that could help Charles patch up the holes in their relationship.

FANNY DOWN

Or perhaps you think they get paid too much to start with, and you don't give a toss about their bloody marriage. Christ, the head start she's had in life, you'd think she could have made something better of it. And besides, who did she think she was marrying? David frigging Bowie of something?

CONFIDENCE

Anyway, whatever your opinion, write and let us know. Send your marriage saving tips to 'Viz Royal Marriage Saving Appeal', P.O. Box IPT, Newcastle upon Tyne NE99 IPT. And remember to mark your envelope 'My heart bleeds for Diana'. All letters will be treated in the strictest confidence. In fact we won't even open them.

Fergie clashes with Queen over telly

The Duchess of York's marriage split with Prince Andrew looks set to end in an undignified slugging match between Fergie and the Palace.

Already the Queen has snubbed the Duchess by banning her from the Palace. And there are even reports of violence between Fergie and her Royal mother-in-law.

FLARED

Former Palace gardener Reg Molesworth confirmed that tempers had flared during a recent visit by Fergie.

BELL BOTTOMED

"I think she'd come back to get her telly and a few of her other things. Next thing I knew there was shouting and screaming and the two of them were at it like cats and dogs. They were scratching and tugging at each other's hair. Eventually Palace bodyguards pulled the Queen off, but she was furious, and told Fergie she would finish it next time she saw her".

DRAIN PIPED

Meanwhile Andrew has been in touch with Palace solicitors over unpaid phone bills at the Duke and Duchesses South York home. Since packing her bags Fergie has refused to contribute towards the unpaid bills, thought to total around £300. Andrew insists that the Duchess was responsible for at least three quarters of the calls made.

The Queen - Fisticuffs with Fergie

VIZ READERS BACK ANDY

Viz readers have voted 8 to 2 in favour of Prince Andrew in a recent poll to find out who is to blame for the York's marriage break up. We asked readers whether the burden of responsibility for the break down in the marriage lay at Andrew's feet, or whether Fergie was at fault, because it was obvious right from the beginning that she was a bit of a tart and not right for our Andy.

We also took the opportunity to ask readers whether they thought Andrew should re-marry quickly on the rebound, take his time and choose the right partner, or say 'What the hell' and play the field a bit, making a bit of hay while the sun shines and generally giving the dog a bone. And surprisingly, 70 per cent of readers plumped for the latter.

NOEL'S ARK!

Telly superstar Noel Edmunds plans to take a page out of God's book in a dramatic one man bid to save London Zoo.

For the tidy bearded TV host plans to build a giant ark - big enough for all the zoo's ten thousand animals. And like the Bible's Noah, telly's Noel plans to march the animals into his ark two by two when the zoo closes later this year.

ANIMALS

Edmunds launched his spectacular rescue plan in the wake of news that many animals may be destroyed when the zoo's gates finally close. And the game show king's ambitious ark project could mean salvation for thousands of helpless animals, including lions, zebras and giraffes.

So sad - a homeless monkey

Noel's nautical mercy dash will be one of the most daring and spectacular animal rescue operations in maritime zoo history. And unlike the light hearted game show's which he hosts on our TV screens, Noel is taking his rescue bid deadly serious.

LINDISFARNE

"He's read the Bible over and over again, and plans to follow Noah's example down to the last detail", one TV insider told us. But other colleagues at the BBC expressed concerns about the scheme.

TYGERS OF PANTANG

"As I recall Noah's ark relied on heavy rainfall raising the water level sufficiently to set it afloat", said weatherman Michael Fish. "I find it highly unlikely, especially in the current climate, that enough rain will fall on London zoo to launch a giant ark".

But, weather permitting, the dare devil former DJ is determined to go ahead. And officials at London Zoo were cautiously optimistic in their response to the rescue plan. "Anything that will help publicise the plight of homeless animals and help to guarantee their future survival is to be welcomed", one told us.

MALTREATMENT

Naturalist, author and part time zoo keeper Gerald Durrell, a renowned critic of animal maltreatment, was surprisingly unimpressed by Edmunds' eleventh hour bid

Animal addict Noel's late, late mercy bid to save London Zoo. Durrell, who's got a grey beard and married an American bird, a bit like Linda McCartney, refused to comment when we rang him at his Jersey home.

Fellow celebrity zoo owner Lord something or other, the randy one who inherited the lions of Longleat the other week, wasn't available for comment.

FISH

And when we rang Jaques Cousteau for a comment his secretary told us he only talks about fish.

SELFISH STARS TURN BACKS ON BEASTS

According to their publicists the top stars will always go out of their way to help a worthy cause.

Whether it's Live Aid, Aids Awareness, Comic Relief or Telethon, there's always a host of famous faces eager to jump on the charity bandwagon.

PUBLICITY

But away from the glare of publicity, just how kind hearted are the stars? We decided to find out by asking a few well known celebrities whether they would be willing to help save the poor, homeless animals of London Zoo.

DAVIDSON - TV vet

Our first call was to TV vet PETER DAVIDSON, star of All Creatures Great and Small. On screen he's on call 24 hours a day to help farm animals in the Yorkshire Dales. But in real life it was a different story.

GIRAFFES

When we asked whether Davidson would be prepared to provide a home for the zoo's giraffes, and some camels, he flatly refused. "I am a busy man. Please stop wasting my time", he told us.

CHARITY

Big hearted strong man GEOFF CAPES is known as the Gentle Giant, and regularly attends charity sports events. But sadly, we have to report that Geoff's gentle caring attitude does not extend to the animals in London Zoo.

BEARS

We asked the World's former Strongest Man whether he could look after a few bears when the zoo closes. We pointed out that these could easily be accommodated in a small pit dug in his back garden.

"I can't keep bears in my garden. It would be illegal", stormed the former policeman. "I could probably look after a couple of budgies, but it would be difficult for me to feed them regularly, especially at Christmas when I'm away doing pantomime", he added.

CAVES - TV strong man

REDSKINS

Rock superstar BONO probably owns a string of houses across the world. And probably has acres of gardens to spare in every one. Surely room for some lions, or perhaps some monkeys, you'd have thought. But no. It seems that big mouth Bono would rather see them destroyed.

"Looking after wild animals is a specialist job", said a

'PAY UP OR SHUT UP!'

American singer songwriter Barry Manilow has sent his number one fan a bill for $28,000 after he caught her singing one of his songs.

Gloria Adams, 53, was in her local delicatessen buying soda pop and pretzels when Manilow popped out from behind a display stand and accused her of humming 'Copa Cobana'.

ROYALTY

Stunned Gloria asked Manilow for his autograph, but all he gave her was a demand for an on-the-spot royalty payment for her use of his song.

LAYERS

After fainting Miss Adams awoke in hospital only to find Manilow's lawyers waiting at her bedside with a court

BONO - Pop big mouth

SAVILLE - TV's Mr Fix It

spokesman for U2's record company. "I'm sure Bono would like to help in some other way if he could", we were told. Little consolation for the poor, teary eyed monkeys with nowhere to go, and no-one to care.

ELTON - Comedy big mouth

Motormouth comic BEN ELTON is quick to tell us how we should save the environment. But does he practice what he preaches?

"No", snapped Ben when we asked him if he wanted a penguin.

RAIDERS

Veteran fund raiser JIMMY SAVILLE has raised millions through his marathon efforts

EXCLUSIVE Beaky Baz slaps a Copa CoBAN on Gloria

summons for non-payment of the $28,000 fee. And now Gloria, a Manilow fan for twenty years, could lose her home if she cannot find the money.

"I don't know what I'm going to do", she told American Knobcheese magazine. "I just pray to God that I won't have to go to prison".

HUMMING

However, a leading music industry lawyer confirmed that Manilow, or any other musician, is quite within their rights to charge royalties from anyone they hear singing, humming or whistling one of their songs in public.

STINKING

"If Barry Manilow overheard this lady humming 'Copa Cobana' in a public place, then as the copyright owner he is entitled to demand a royalty fee. It is his song, so it's entirely up to him what he charges. I'm afraid that if the lady can't afford to pay, she will simply have to go to prison for a very long time".

While millionaire Manilow (left) wears a flouzy shirt, former fan Gloria faces financial ruin and homelessness.

REEKING

It is very uncommon for artists to pursue such claims in Britain, although one well publicised case involved ex-Beatle Paul McCartney. During a seventies concert by his band Wings, McCartney invited the entire audience to join him for an encore singing 'Mull of Kintyre', which they did. But the moment the huge crowd left the stadium they were stopped by mean McCartney's lawyers who demanded a cash payment of £7.50 from every member of the crowd for the rights to sing his song.

for charity. But when we asked Uncle Jim to 'fix it' for two rhinoceroses and an elephant to live in his posh London apartment the golden oldie almost choked on his cigar.

"Eurgn-eugn-eugh! You must be kidding, guys n' gals!", he replied.

DOLPHINS

Out of over two dozen celebrities who we contacted, only one, RODNEY BEWES, was willing to accommodate animals from the zoo. "I could probably manage something, as long as it wasn't too big", he told us.

SEAHAWKS

And so, twenty five years since hanging was abolished in Britain, hundreds of innocent little animals face the death penalty - a sentence passed on them by the heartless stars of showbusiness. A chilling thought to bear in mind next time you turn on your television.
